V. FERAL HOG TRAPPING UPDATE

Staff Contact: David Lopez

This Week:

12/30/2024 - 1/3/2025: Fortunately, despite two instances of people tampering with the bait site and cameras, hogs continue to feed at the bait station each night. The trap is approximately 30% complete. The trapper was on site again on Dec. 30 to add additional panels and fill the feeder.

If all goes according to plan and we have no other issues with interference, we anticipate the trap being fully assembled over the next few days. Once that has been completed, and the remote trigger mechanism is in place, we enter a waiting phase of heavy baiting in the corral until the entire sounder gathers in the corral at the same time.

Though night imagery makes it difficult to get a reliably accurate count, it appears the sounder is around 25 hogs. During this "bait and wait" phase, remote cameras will be monitored and when the sounder is in the right position, the trap will be triggered. This phase is entirely dependent on the sounder's behavior. Everything could align the first night, or it may take several.

Next Steps:

Assuming all goes as planned, trapped hogs will be loaded into the trailer the morning after capture and will be delivered to the USDA holding facility. At that point, staff and the trapper will reconvene and reassess the situation. It is possible that capturing this sounder could greatly reduce the local population and we may decide to pause trapping efforts. It is also possible that other sounders are wandering our natural areas and we need to move trapping efforts to a different location. We will not know that until this sounder is removed.

A Feral Hog Trapping web page has been added to the City of Kyle Parks and Recreation Department's home page. The page has information on feral hogs, including current trapping updates, their background, suppression efforts and other frequently asked questions like 'Can hunting control hog numbers?' and 'Are there other options to remove hogs besides trapping and removing them?', and can be viewed here <https://www.cityofkyle.com/recreation/page/feral-hog-trapping>.
